

"As missionaries in the modern world, how do we define finishing our race, and finishing well at that? While it is tempting to define our life's work by visible and immediate results in the field, I would like to suggest that finishing well has more to do with how we live as believers, than it has to do with what we achieve (though that aspect is important as well). It is not about what we produce, but how we have lived in Christ and thus testify to His kindness and goodness... Are you finishing well?"

In this booklet, Daniel Jesudason combines perspectives from Scripture, personal experience and sound theology in guiding us to finishing well.
